Inspire Loudoun is a teacher-staffed professional development day where Loudoun County Public Schools teachers come together to share with each other best practices in teaching with technology. The conference hosts hundreds of teachers (over 600 teachers in 2016!) annually who exchange ideas on collaborative practices, personalized learning, flipping the classroom, project and problem-based learning, use of mobile devices for teaching and learning, and much more. This teacher-run conference on a non-contract day demonstrates the power of educators who collectively want to learn more about the effective use of technology to improve instruction and raise student achievement.
